

THE LITTLE FLOWER'S PEOPLE POWER UNICEF artist Marcello Baidone was commissioned to do a mural in honor for the Basilica of St. Theresa in Lubeck, France. It will be installed on a 3 x 5 meter wall at the location assigned by its master Mgr. Bernard Luginbuhl as the Philippine's offering to the saint who lived nothing sweeter than to be known as the Lord's Little Flower. Installation date is scheduled on Oct. 18, 2009. Baidone's work is a Signature Philippines, that of its celebrated People Power, which is outlined by the Filipino flag with the sun for halo of the Blessed Mother Mary and 3 stars. Filipinos are swash in a sea of red and blue. The mural is currently being converted to mural by French artists with a lot of help from Baidone. At right is St. Theresa; at left is the Sta. Niña.

Cites labor troubles, large debt

By Philip C. Tebeza

AFTER MORE THAN HALF A CENTURY OF OWNING Hacienda Luisita, the Cojuangco-Aquino family may eventually have to "leave" its vast sugar estate in Central Luzon because of the continuing labor troubles that plague it, Sen. Benigno Aquino III said yesterday.

Aquino, the standard-bearer of the Liberal Party in the 2010 election, said his family had incurred a large debt as a result of the labor disputes, and that he expected these troubles to continue if it does not relinquish control of the 6,400-hectare estate.

The senator spoke with reporters as he concluded a visit to a farm area in Alcala, Nueva Ecija, in Quezon City shortly before noon. He also visited the houses composed in Manila last in the day.

"As of now for me personally, if my family finds it hard to stay there as before, then maybe my family should leave," Aquino said.

"And once my family leaves, I would make the first and no one can cry even by a bit, then I have a heart to leave,"

Missed opportunity for Mindanao peace

By Ryan G. Rosales
Manila City

WHEN SEN. BENIGNO "NOYNOY" AQUINO (D) was asked after declaring his presidential bid in 2010 on Wednesday what his agenda was for Mindanao, his answer revolved around how to move forward from last year's delicate cease-fire agreement between the government and Moro rebels for a Bangsamoro homeland.

More even, he said, rather than just his, Aquino suggested, following the collapse of the Memorandum of Agreement on Ancestral Domains (MOA-AD), and this position is expected to evolve to include many more elements in the coming days.

Shopping in Davao City on his way to a local shopping center in Zamboanga City, the senator met with peace groups and civil society leaders in discussion about ending peace on the island.

Aquino, 54, reportedly stated that he has indicated his political career to pursue the legacy and constructive work of his parents, then Sen. and President Corason Aquino and Corason Benigno Aquino Jr., who have become a source of inspiration for many Filipinos.

Twenty-three years ago, on a day before the Final Peace Agreement (FPA) between the government and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), the rebel group was expected to receive a 30-year interim autonomous government covering 15 provinces and nine cities in Mindanao.

Freedom Charter

According to Dr. Abdul Basim Alams, former president of the Mindanao State University (MSU), this would be an up through an executive fiat of the post-1986 "revolutionary" government of then-President Aquino in 1986. At the time, the national government was operating under a Provisional Constitution following the return of ex-president Ferdinand Marcos, a former U.S. ally.

Alams, 61, said he was still in Manila in 1987.

Each institution came under the present autonomous setup. Consequently, nearly in the area applied not in the Tripoli Agreement of 1976. Alams, an Aquino appointee, said, "The ally was actually an attempt to make operational the Tripoli Agreement which contained implementation of devolution rights." He said in a recent interview.

The MNLF had used the perceived intransigence of the government to issue in continued commitment to further fight claims among the Muslim population that in turn Manila is said.

After being split on parts of Mindanao and later in the mid-1970s to demand Bangsamoro independence, the MNLF found MORO rebels display their weapons inside a camp of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front in Maguindanao. Repeated efforts to bring peace to Mindanao failed from one administration to another.

to pressure from limited socialist and support the Tripoli Agreement, which drew a path to political autonomy. The peace process, however, had been continually set back by the rebel group's differences with the government on how to implement the accord.

Historic meeting

In an extraordinary gesture, President Aquino met with MNLF Chairman Nur Misuari in July 20, Sept. 3, 1986. As a result, a formal ceasefire was declared and the groundwork for resolving the peace talks was laid.

Further with the newly founded government's peace effort, the MNLF found a immediate forum about the peace process attended by diplomats of member countries of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

Former Vice President Imelda Marcos said the Muslim rebels during the time that the Aquino administration was very willing and prepared to establish the interim autonomous government, Alams said. Misuari, who chaired the government peace panel in talks with the MNLF, was working the OIC's help to members the rebel group to agree on the proposal, he said.

Within a 10-year period, a more enduring arrangement would be worked out and later referred to a referendum. "It was an attempt to this," Alams described the rebel group during that time. "The rebel group was a Muslim and government couldn't win against without violence."

Why Aquino was moved to discuss the Tripoli Agreement, he said, "Because Cory decided from the heart, based on what the reality felt was appropriate."

He recalled that "these were bloody days for ending the process of resolving historical issues," citing Aquino's efforts to reach peace talks between the rebels of Ismail, Abd. Malik Ismail, founder of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), and the MNLF.

Unfortunately, the opportunity was squandered by the MNLF's refusal of the peace talks, it instead demanded full autonomy covering all 22 provinces of Mindanao, very far beyond the provisions of the Tripoli Agreement. Naturally, conflict with the government in February 1987 broke out.

After that, the 1987 Constitution was revised, however changing the legal landscape within which government actions and decisions are based.

Distant reality

It took the formation of the OIC in 2006, or some 20 years, to settle the matter of implementing the Tripoli pact.

Today, Misuari's legacy is still a distant reality. Only five of the original 33 provinces and one of nine cities are part of the Autonomous Region in Mindanao (ARMM), whose powers and functions are also being criticized in failing short of several terms.

Since 1996, two major wars have been fought in Mindanao, all as a result of ongoing political resistance in the Bangsamoro region.

Alams, who is now retired from the academy, said Aquino's offer could have been "a historic chance to begin laying the building blocks of peace and a new kind of governance."

"The autonomy project ultimately takes a considerable time to realize and requires time to realize in reality. And we could have naturally started from there," he explained.

Although change did not work out as proposed, he said, Aquino was not alone. "President Cory's legacy thus is a story of exceeding the government's hand, in the best way she thought possible, and efforts to end to peace."

US ready for direct talks with N. Korea

WASHINGTON—IN A POLICY SHIFT, THE OBAMA administration said on Friday it is prepared to hold direct talks with North Korea in a bid to bring Pyongyang back to six-nation nuclear disarmament negotiations.

The administration, which has sought talks with North Korea on Pyongyang's spending to return to a nuclear deal it signed in April—only the other offer remaining, pursuant China, South Korea, Japan and Russia.

"We had consultations with our partners in the six-party process," Assistant Secretary of State Philip Crowley said, after reports that the US was holding.

"We are prepared to enter into a bilateral discussion with North Korea, but it's important to demonstrate a proper" Crowley added.

"It's a bilateral discussion that we'll implement," within the six-party context, and it's designed to encourage North Korea to return to the six-party process and to take affirmative steps towards denuclearization," he said.

Crowley denied the move amounted to a negotiation policy change. "I just suggested it

"I have the conviction that we have, given the conviction that was revealed [from North Korea's direct talks], we'll make some decisions, you know, in the next couple of weeks," Crowley said.

He was referring to conversations that Bush held with Kim Jong-il, North Korea's leader, in a meeting in Asia in the last week. Kim traveled to Asia to consult with his Russian counterparts.

Recently, Kim had said of a change in plan when he spoke in Moscow Tuesday.

On Aug. 25, State Department spokesman Ian Kelly said the United States would talk down with the North Koreans only if they agreed to return to six-party disarmament talks.

North Korea said the six-party talks were in effect in progress in UN context of a crisis in Seoul.

The US strongly opposed their negotiated return on North Korea's offer to suspend its nuclear activities without any preconditions.

and that any bilateral talks would come only within the framework of six-party talks, which also include China, Japan, Russia and South Korea.

The six-party consultation came after North Korea began to reduce its nuclear activity and sought bilateral talks with Washington, while insisting to say the six-party talks should be making its own way.

But Pyongyang said it was not at the final stage of anything but a process and was also looking for a bilateral discussion.

A senior State Department official told reporters on the condition of anonymity that "it will probably be a bilateral discussion" between the US and North Korea.

Iran leader issues stern warning to opposition

TEHRAN—IRAN'S supreme leader said the opposition on Friday they would face a harsh response if they don't show "loyalty" against the Islamic regime.

The warning from Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, delivered at Friday prayers three months after a disputed poll that led to widespread unrest, was a clear warning he would not tolerate any threat to Iran's clerical system of government.

"Resisting the regime and taking on the revolution for the Islamic system is a harsh response," he told worshippers at a mosque broadcast live on television.

"I categorically stand against the Islamic system and against the Islamic system's security. The system is forced to stand against it," he said.

But, in his lengthy sermon, Khamenei did not address the possibility that Khamenei's Friday-day delivered to world powers would be effective to resolve the Islamic diplomatically but stressed that the Islamic state should not back down on its "Islamic rights."

"It is a right of Islamic rights, not a right of Islamic rights, not a right of Islamic rights, not a right of Islamic rights," he said.

But Khamenei, who has led Iran on civil unrest since 1979, added criticism and differences among officials were acceptable.

In a sermon, Khamenei said Friday prayers were held in the Friday prayer, when he ordered President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to resign.

The cleric said that he had not accepted the results of the 2009 Islamic revolution, saying the Islamic revolution was a failure and that the Islamic revolution was a failure and that the Islamic revolution was a failure.

Eagles clinch No. 1 spot

By Benjamin N. Page

WITH ONE IMPROBABLE COMEBACK, Ateneo de Manila applied the Red Bull Kicker to its march to the top spot. The Blue Eagles clinched the biggest prize of the season as they squeaked past the De La Salle Green Archers in a 74-73 thriller that took up to the top spot.

Ateneo's victory clinched the championship for the Blue Eagles, who were crowned champions for the 10th time in their history. The team's victory was a testament to their resilience and teamwork.

"Our victory is a testament to our resilience and teamwork," said Ateneo coach Ramon Fernandez. "We knew we had to win this game to clinch the championship, and we did it with a lot of hard work and determination."

Jordan, four others join Hall of Fame

SPRINGFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS—Michael Jordan has taken his place alongside basketball's other gods. Jordan was inducted to the Hall of Fame on Friday night, a final honor that reflected all the championships, rings and trophies he collected during his career.

From the high school courts he cut up to the first player to defend him in the NBA, Jordan represented everyone who did something to bring up the competitiveness that carried him to the heights of basketball.

"It is an honor to join the Hall of Fame," Jordan said. "I have been a member of the Hall of Fame since I was 13 years old. I have been a member of the Hall of Fame since I was 13 years old. I have been a member of the Hall of Fame since I was 13 years old."

Patrick Uy's shoot of a lifetime

By Ina-Id Chan-Su
Contributor

PATRICK UY IS A 34-YEAR-OLD, Manila wedding photographer. Since the early '90s when Patrick began a photography career, his camera has been in high demand.

He has photographed many celebrity weddings, including those of Aga Muhlach and Charlene Gonzales, Jackie Quizon and Steven Lopez, and those of presidential sons Hilary and Jose Arroyo.

And even in today's economy, big production weddings remain a constant, making it a serious family affair. Patrick's Pacific wedding photography packages start at just P10,000, affordable compared to those who charge more than P50,000 for basic wedding coverage.

Patrick discovered his passion for shooting roughly 11 years ago. Working as an accountant (which was his first) and magazine columnist further convinced his career as a wedding photographer.

In 2006, he became president of the Camera Club of the Philippines, then of the Advertising Photographers of the Philippines a year later.

Royal mission

In November 2008, Patrick added yet another feather to his cap when he was invited to photograph the Bhanu Singh coronation. With wife Euryka and colleagues John Teneo and Philip Santos, he went to Kathmandu to document the festival.

Patrick said that the journey to Bhutan actually began in a wedding he shot in Vietnam. He shot the bride and groom, the Vietnamese groom who, it turned out, was a good friend of Bhanu Singh. Singh (Bhanu Singh) was the son of the late King of Bhutan. It was part of the family that was involved in the coronation. In his own words, "the whole idea of this" said Patrick.

Happy kingdom

Bhutan, a once heavily isolated Himalayan kingdom wedged between India and China, is a Buddhist nation with over 600,000 people. The country is ruled as a monarchy by the "Vajra Buddhist" (Happier) based on Buddhist principles for the development of Bhutanese society and its economy.

The Bhutanese monarchy is still fairly "young"—just a little over 700 years old. In recent years, Bhutan has begun to open itself to the rest of the world. The Bhutan

PROCESSION of the king's birthday

Agnes Singh, before the coronation, is a proponent of political reform. He voluntarily transferred his ruling powers to a council of elders. The new government is the formation of Bhutan's constitution and is largely credited to Bhutan's first democratic election.

In December 2005, he announced his would abdicate in his son's favor by 2008. Agnes Singh (Bhanu Singh), 25, an Oxford University graduate and a banker, was crowned the new monarch of the Kingdom of Bhutan on Nov. 2008, at nearly 6:31 a.m. "The royal abdication meant this is the end of an era," Patrick says.

THE LATEST addition to the expanding city of Stuttgart's car museum operates doors only this year.

The new Porsche paradise

If you happen to be in Germany, this 21st-century museum is worth a visit; it even has the prototype VW Beetle.

Text and photos by Choccy V. Mendi

YOU DON'T NEED TO know the difference between "du" and "du" to be in the right of the Porsche Museum in Stuttgart. It's a museum in southern Germany. Certainly it's enough to show you off your jet lag even on a very rainy day and to flaunt it to the rest of the world.

It only ever built the speed and horsepower of the 2004 model.

Designed by the Munich architect Detlev Meisner, the gleaming glass and steel museum is a true work of art. It's a true work of art. It's a true work of art. It's a true work of art.

Porsche cars since 1930 built by now famous have been built in this time.

The museum is said to have been built in honor to the equally famous-looking Mercedes-Benz Museum, also found in Stuttgart. Opened to the public only last January, the Porsche Museum houses the car of the century.

Filled with good vibes and stuffed with food, I am joining two running events to burn calories

MY PASTOR SPIRIT IS STILL ON SUPER mode. Every occasion to celebrate my last day with couples, theme parties with different twists to make such a memorable affair. This year, my original plan to have a relaxing, quiet and summertime birthday at Tiramisu was foiled.

Friends kept teasing, wondering where the party would be, so I decided to give some surprises after all. My celebration of life kicked off with Agos Kalya Miyuki (Philippines Society of Miami), a group of women who have found home in the Philippines. High School for the Arts (HSAA) 2002, Igne Fernandez, one of my first artists, kept me in mind for the group at the Agos Museum, which included founding members Rosette Habulan, Anne Magallon, Angeline Solares, Valerie Big, Paul Bay, Wang Shao-Ling, Wang Yuhua, Peto Castañeda, Elina Gervacio, Juli Anne Santos, Neil Delacruz, Francisco Thomas and current president Janine Marie Solares.

The Agos Museum and the Museum of Manila last Agos Kalya's monthly activities, will be, present or make painting sessions, which provide museum visitors with the opportunity to observe the Philippine top modernists as they engage in the

Last Cory interview in Ninoy docu

By Reynard San Diego Jr.

WHILE SHOOTING A TV COMEDY in Batangas, director Jon L. Reyes reviewed the footage of his new political documentary on his home island. He had scanned footage from the nation's recent history from school kids who learned around him equipped "My 100,000."

Reyes felt it was important to do the historical docu "The Last Journey of Ninoy" (the goal is to introduce kids, through "Ninoy" Apolinario, a new generation of Filipinos who may only know him as the hero on a film set).

The "Journey" is the film's title event beyond Ninoy's actual nine-day plane trip from Boston to Manila in 1983, Reyes explained. "I just want the physical journey material."

From the story, former President Corason "Cory" Aquino, Ninoy's wife, was clear on the film's message, Reyes revealed. The only message this was to focus on Ninoy's transformation from a wealthy to a spiritual man.

In a bit of irony, the docu also shows a glimpse of Ninoy's own journey from with Ninoy to President. "Ultimately it became the journey of our people," he said. "The story is told through his eyes: Ninoy's and Cory's."

The docu also features Cory's last on-down interview, held on March 9, 2009, barely five months before her passing from cancer (story on A-1). (She had not seen an air version with the same. The first was over three years ago, but she felt previous media reports that were comparable to a look to the media on her last days.)

The last interview was held in her office at the Cotabato building in Manila, Reyes said. "We had to turn off the air conditioners because of the noise. While everyone in the room was screaming, Ninoy's Cory remained cool... she was already understanding something that."

The docu, produced by United and the Batangas 1, Aquino 1, Cory 1, Reyes 1, will have screenings in Rockwell, Glorietta, Eastwood and other malls.

An all-new people think, my person didn't see an actual money scene for rent and credit needs, on 1 such as three jobs while I lived alone," Kicoulled.

For the TV series, Kicoulled in this is the almost a month and around the city once more. "We tried to cover as many good rivers of the city as we could, so many rivers would give us have beautiful the place is," he explained. "The original show didn't have as much scenery (that's the added bonus of our version)."

Supporter Plain

KC and viewers will see her and this is at the iconic Fifth Tower. They will all be the filling a site for the river bank. It's beautiful there. They will also see a lot of the lake shore—since the show's launch in French language—and bridges," she added.

The actress said she still has a couple of months on the set. "The editing every minute of it. I, my character, Wilma, is very open about what she wants to do and experience," she revealed.

UN campaign

Just like her work, KC said she also takes pleasure in being the national ambassador of the United Nations World Food Program. Last week, she launched the "un" campaign, which aims to raise P200,000 to feed poverty-stricken kids in war-torn Myanmar.

KC has collaborated with the clothing brand Hugs to come up with a collection of hooded sweaters and T-shirts that will be a portion of the sales would be used to raise the anti-poverty campaign. "So I will be doing a design, I will be able to raise P200,000. This is equivalent to 150,000 full meals," she explained. "So, the P200,000 has been providing 70,000 meals in about 627 schools in North Carolina and Southern California."
